Cloud and Licensing

Originally, Cloud Computing was popular for reducing costs and providing access to leading edge infrastructure and expertise. Today it is firmly part of the new IT model which fosters scalability, mobility, agility and OPEX expenditure based on per user and per month billing

Many industry commentators predict Cloud Computing will become a normal part of every business. Different formats suit different businesses and include: colocation, private Cloud, public Cloud and hybrid Cloud.

Key Cloud decisions include choosing the right type/s and the costs and opportunities regarding licensing. For many understanding licensing is difficult and if not transacted correctly can end up an unnecessarily expensive process.

Whether or not you are looking at Cloud right now we invite you to sign up for this free Microsoft Licensing offer kindly organised by RHIFE. It will give you a comprehensive look at your portfolio of Microsoft licenses, as well as an indication of Cloud readiness.

To participate fill in the attached form and hand it to a Harbour IT employee – or email it through to: enquiries@harbourit.com.au
